Cars and Wires Tied Up

Manhattan surface car conduits, cially along the Central Park tracks skirting the park wall, and tied things up in a tangle generally during the very early morning hours. Western Union and Postal wires in an area running south to Bound Brook, west to a line about fifty miles from the seaboard and far enough north to include a goodly part of New York, came down so steadily under the wet snow and wind blasts of the night that it was not until mid-afternoon yesterday that the tele-graph service was back close to normal again; and even then the telegraph companies found themselves with ro many delayed messages piled up on them that things were still somewhat aktiter around the telegraph offices even after the wires had been pronounced cured and able to go to work again. Telegraph poles bowed before the blasts and fe'l prone, particularly on the flat stretches traversed by the Long Isl-and Railroad. The New York Central lines were covered almost completely to their factories from Manhattan to Rochester Thursday night and yesterday morning with snow and drifts measuring from two to five feet deep, causing a stoppage of all broke away from the Bush docks before freight carrying after 10 o clock Thurs-daylight.
